Sir

With reference to your letter No L 4792-93 of the 8th instant, stating that the detailed discussions on each subjects should be sent up to Government along with the resolutions thereon, I have the honor to state that till the new constitution came into existence, discussi used to take place in the open Council and these were invariably incorporated in the proceedings and sent along with the resolutions But under the new constitution, the Congress Party, which has a majoirty in the Council, will always have a party meeting just prior to the Council meeting, when the members of the party discuss the subjects in detail and arrive at decisions and it is only the resolutions that will be moved and passed at the Council meetings But however, if there are discussions on any subjects, they will be as far as possible briefly incorporated and sent up to Government

I have honor to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient servant,

W H Hanumanthappa
